The Vereinigung der gegenseitigen Bauernhilfe (VdgB), or Farmers' Mutual Aid Society, is a "non-party, but politico-economic organization, the object of which is to educate the farmers as good democrats." 2. Membership of the Society in the Soviet Zone has reached 400,000, or 60% of the farmers in the Zone. 3. It is divided into 10,282 local societies (Ortsvereinigungen), 128 "Kreis", and 5 Provincial/"Land" committees. The latter are autonomous. Liaison exists between provincial committees and the SNA, and the Central Farmers' Secretariat in Berlin. 4. SLD members are in the majority. The percentages of VdgB committee members are, according to departmental statistics: ShD 46%, Non-party 45.8%, CDU 4.6%, LDP 3.6%. 5. The monthly subscription of RMI is not sufficient to cover all expenses. The VdgB is charged with a number of public duties, e.g., plans for the cultivation of the land. It is therefore subsidized by the Provinces and Lander. The amount of the subsidies is not yet known. 6. The local societies control a number of concerns, which belong to each particular society. The Kreis and Provincial Committees, and to some extent the Central Secretariat, have a right of disposal (Verfügungs-recht). In the Zone there exist approximately 2,000 machine-hiring stations. By the time of the harvest, this number should reach 3,000. They dispose of 5,121 tractors, 4,217 seeding machines, 10,050 binding machines, 5,547 threshing machines, 8,387 trailer ploughs (Anhangepflugen).
